Lawmakers express concerns on the Gulf

WASHINGTON (AP) – The questions asked Secretary of State James Baker in two days on Capitol Hill reveal that lawmakers are worried about America’s Persian Gulf commitment even if it succeeds in forcing Iraq’s Saddam Hussein to withdraw behind his borders.

Even then, congressmen wanted to know, what would keep Saddam’s chemical and nuclear warfare potential – not to mention his million-man army – from again threatening the region? And – an underlying question that poked through the accolades for Baker and President Bush – they asked how the United States ultimately will extract itself from the region.

The questions betraying uneasiness were sandwiched between ovations of praise so generous they might have made a lesser man blush.

Everyone in America is “thrilled” with the worldwide cooperation that the administration has won, Rep. Sam Gejdenson, D-Conn., told the secretary at Tuesday’s House hearing. “You’ve done a terrific job.” “Superb,” said Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., on Wednesday. “You have made an impression on the world, and that doesn’t happen to many people many times.” “A brilliant job so far,” said Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., but “I need more explanations of where it’s going to go from here, what your plans are.”

Baker’s replies were often vague. He spoke of a regional security arrangement – some sort of Mideast NATO – to check Saddam.

He spoke of a long-range American sea or land presence. And he called for American patience.

“That is what we ask most of the American people,” he said. “Stand firm, be patient and remain united so that together we can show that aggression does not pay.” No one argued with that, but the tough questions kept coming.

Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., said even if Bush’s goals are met and the emir of Kuwait is restored to rule, “we are left with an Iraq to deal with afterwards.” Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., wanted to know if Baker could not provide some sort of “international United Way campaign” donor chart, listing which countries were providing troops, which were sending money, and how much.

Biden wanted to know why Bush was so insistent on returning the emir to power rather than taking the opportunity to allow Kuwaitis to exercise a democratic selection of leaders.

Rep. James Leach, R-Iowa, made the same point a day earlier. He said an emirate “is a little bit difficult from a historical American perspective to be too thrilled about protecting.” Rep. Peter Kostmayer, D-Pa., saying he hated being “the skunk at the garden party,” wondered whether, deep down, this wasn’t a fight for cheap oil.

“I don’t think that young men and young women of this country are prepared to spill their blood in the sands of Saudi Arabia to keep the price of gasoline cheap,” Kostmayer said.

Baker said protecting the world’s oil supplies was an objective but “not the overriding reason why America is there.” Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., just back from a visit with the troops in Saudi Arabia, said Saudi forces were in a front-line position, along with U.S. Marines, to shed the first blood in a war “but I didn’t notice any of our other allies.”

for Yemen.

Saddam has promised to free all foreign women and children but to keep the men as human shields against attack at strategic sites.

In another attempt to play on Western anxiety about the captives, he released messages Tuesday purported to be from seven such hostages, including an American.

Also, London-based Kurdish dissidents from Iraq pinpointed six installations where they said hostages were held. They included a chemical weapons factory, an air force training college and other military bases.

In other developments:

• Britain pledged funds to a U.S.-led effort to help nations suffering from the U.N.-ordered sanctions against Iraq. Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher made the commitment at a meeting with Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady.

Soviet President Gorbachev meets Bush on Sunday in Helsinki, Finland, to discuss the crisis. Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, who met Gorbachev on Wednesday, said later he hoped Aziz might pass a message to Gorbachev to relay to Bush at the summit.

• Britons paid nearly $40 million in purchase taxes on gasoline in August because of higher pump prices triggered by the crisis, Britain’s Automobile Association said Wednesday.

• Sheik Jaber al-Ahmed al-Sabah, the exiled emir of Kuwait, reassured Kuwaitis on Saudi television Wednesday of worldwide support for an Iraqi pullout from Kuwait and restoration of his family’s rule.

• Bush placed a morale-boosting call to U.S. Ambassador Nathaniel Howell at the besieged U.S. Embassy in Kuwait City, where a skeleton staff remains in defiance of Iraqi orders to close.

Saddam, in his televised statement Wednesday, called upon “all Arabs, within the teachings of Allah and according to the Moslem Holy War of Jihad, to fight this U.S. presence of non-believers.

and a collection of 475,000 volumes. Presently, the library houses 788,937 volumes, more than one million microforms, maps, records, tapes and other instructional material. In addition, student enrollment has grown well over 10,000 students.

For Booth, the Rettberg-Gruber firm has recommended a four-story addition to the rear of the building, off of Garfield Avenue.

Both of the proposals must be approved by the Illinois Board of Higher Education, the Board of Governors, the Illinois legislature and the Governor before the 1992 construction plans get under way.

Administrators expect at least one of the proposals to pass before finally moving on to the legislature.

“We’re hoping we get both,” Armstrong said, but added approval by the BOG often time does not mean approval by the legislature or the governor.

“The governor has the final word,” she said. “He can reduce something the legislature recommends or he can eliminate it.”

end of the week,” said BOG spokeswoman Michelle Brazell. The BOG is the governing board for Eastern, Western Illinois University, Northeastern Illinois University, Chicago State University and Governors State University.

“What happens Thursday will determine what happens next week,” Brazell added, noting if an agreement was not reached Thursday, negotiations would likely continue into next week. “I think the board is hopeful that things will be wrapped up. But they’re (the Board) not anxious. There really is no deadline.”

The pay clause of the faculty contracts was the only portion to expire. Brazell said the remainder of the contracts would stay in effect until August of next year.

Fiala keeps Subway crowd in stitches

Turnout for comedian's show one of Subway's largest ever

By CHRIS ENSTROM
Staff writer

Review

Ed Fiala just may be the funniest man in Illinois after all.

"I heard that a toupee truck overturned on Interstate 57 this morning," said the comedian in his opening line at the Subway Wednesday night. "The police are still combing the area."

Using an assortment of his own sound effects to enhance a night full of jokes, Fiala, who was recognized by Showtime's Comedy Club network as the "Funniest Man in Illinois," literally kept one of the Subway's largest crowds in stitches.

Fiala perfected seemingly simple sound effects like a motorcyle and train, but absolutely mastered sounds we ususally don't think about such as falling snow flakes and an underwater banjo.

Mimicking the voice of Bullwinkle the "Mousse," Fiala said "Hey Rocky, let's get a perm."

His "dictionary" was a big hit with the 300 students who attended the show, as he defines "Denial" as a river in Egypt, "Indicator" as a town where some Eastern students are from, and "Elevator" as Star War villian Darth Vader's wife.

"I liked the dictionary the best but his sound effects got old. After awhile I was just waiting for another obnoxious noise," said freshman speech communications major Chris Hoster.

Taking a jab at one of his favorite targets, Chicago Bears defensive lineman William Perry, Fiala said: "They call him the refrigerator because the light is not always on." Perry was also ridiculed by Fiala during the comedian's last visit to Eastern in 1986, when Fiala dedicated a section of his show to a "Refrigerator" impersonation.

Fiala's other joke topics included Yugo cars, the Winter Olympics, baby sitting and every comedian's favorite target — an ex-wife.

"It takes tragedy to make comedy," Fiala said after the show. "And with the bad things that have happened to me, I have plenty of material. A comedian friend of mine died and me and the other guys made jokes at the funeral. Comedy covers up the sadness. I'd rather laugh than cry."

The 39-year-old Fiala has appeared on HBO, the Tonight Show, the Oprah Winfrey Show and the Donahue Show. In addition, he has opened for music acts such as REO Speedwagon and Whitney Houston. He has also begun writing scripts for "The Simpsons," which is Fox television's current prime-time cartoon sensation.

Subway Coordinator Brian Moushon said that over 300 people attended the show. Moushon added the turnout is the largest crowd he's seen in the Subway since 1987. The Subway was so crowded, some students ended up sitting on their neighbors laps.

Abandoned storage tanks still pose a threat

By PHILLIP LAIRD
Staff writer

Charleston Fire Chief Tom Watson said Wednesday that abandoned storage tanks like the ones at 1009 Lincoln Ave. remain a problem in town, despite efforts by the fire department to identify and force the the removal of those tanks.

In the Aug. 27 edition, The Daily Eastern News reported that the property at 1009 Lincoln Ave. has five potentially dangerous tanks in the ground beneath it. Jim McCaslin, manager of the division of chemical and petroleum safety with the Illinois State Fire Marshall's Office, said the tanks likely contain 2 to 6 inches of petroleum that may pose a threat to nearby residents if the tanks leak.

The owner of the property, George "Andy" McArthur, was ordered two years ago to remove the tanks from the site, which was formerly a gas station. Records show no removal to date, and McArthur is now attempting to sell the property.

But according to Watson and officials from the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency, leaking underground storage tanks are a common problem in most communities.

"In the 1940s and '50s, you could find a gas station on every corner," Watson said, explaining the large number of old tanks found in the city.

Watson said property transfers, rebuildings and rezonings over the years cause some tanks to be hidden and forgotten as time passes.

Steve Colantino of the IEPA's Division of Land Pollution Control said earlier that the state responds to seven emergency incidents, such as leaking underground storage tanks, each week. "Usually four or five are in northern Illinois and the others in central or southern parts of the state," Colantino said.

Because of several such accidents across the country, federal and state environmental laws were passed in the early '80s concerning the installation, maintenance and removal of underground tanks.

Illinois adopted a Leaking Underground Storage Tank program as a result of federal Environmental Protection Agency provisions. Charleston Building and Zoning Officer Jeff Finley said the city then adopted state laws in 1987.

Watson said the fire department began checking suspected sites of abandoned tanks in 1988. "We removed 41 tanks in 1988 and 17 in 1989," he said, "and so far we've removed 13 tanks this year."

He noted that 15 site inspections were made in 1988, and McArthur's property was among them. Watson said the two-year lapse in enforcing a state fire marshal's order to remove those tanks resulted from a change in federal and state laws.

Watson said when the Leaking

Underground Storage Tank program was initiated in 1987, local fire inspectors were responsible for enforcement of the law and removal of tanks.

"The federal and state laws were changed," Watson said. "Now tank inspectors have their own division in the Office of the State Fire Marshal in Springfield with the Division of Chemical and Petroleum Safety."

Watson said the change in law and the creation of a new enforcement division caused some cases to get lost during reorganization. "The state's still in the process of getting caught up with back cases," Watson said.

Although Watson couldn't give specific locations, he said there are "probably two or three other sites" in Charleston where owners have ignored orders to remove tanks. Watson said he didn't want to identify specific sites until he found the files because "I don't want to get anyone in trouble needlessly."

Student liaison proposed

By ANITA MAIELLA
Staff writer

The Student Senate passed a proposal Wednesday that may allow an Eastern student to become a non-voting member of the Charleston City Council.

The proposal states that the student will work as a liaison between the city council and the student body to help improve communication between the two.

The student will participate in debate, but will not be able to vote.

Senate member Brian Moushon, who presented the proposal, said the proposal and a letter will be sent to the city council for final approval.

"I don't think there will be a problem with having it passed," Moushon said. "I think it will be effective to have a student sit on the city council."

As a non-voting member on the council, the student will provide "open communication with the city as well as student government and the campus as a whole," Moushon said.

"Even if the student cannot vote, the student can participate on any issue that is discussed at the meetings," Moushon said.

He added the position will be open to all students and that the students must collect 100 signatures on a petition from the student body, have good academic standing and be 19 years old to apply for the position.

The student would then be appointed to the position by the senate.

In other business, the senate passed a proposal to begin a grievance policy on campus.

The proposal states that the grievance policy will consist of an ad being placed in The Daily Eastern News five times throughout the school year. The student could then clip it out and write out their grievance and send it to the Student Senate.

The grievance policy will give students the opportunity to express some of the problems they are experiencing at Eastern.

Martha Price, Executive Vice President, said typical complaints include food quality in the residence halls, student parking and lighting on campus.

The senate also tabled recognition of two campus organizations that, if approved, would be the local campaigns for candidates in Illinois' executive elections in November.

One group would campaign for Republican gubernatorial candidate Jim Edgar and the other group would campaign for George Ryan, a Republican campaigning for Secretary of State.

Speed possible cause of motorcycle accident

By PHILLIP LAIRD
Staff writer

Preliminary reports from Coles County Coroner Dick Lynch indicate excessive speed as a possible cause for Saturday's motorcycle accident which claimed the life of Eastern employee Jack Percy.

"We know his speed was in excess of safety," Lynch said. He added the weather and road conditions were good that day.

Yet, police are uncertain as to whether another vehicle forced Percy off the road or if anyone witnessed the accident.

"All we know is that he lost control of the motorcycle, causing it to go off the road," Lynch said.

The accident occurred on the Oakland-Newman Road 15 miles northeast of Charleston when Percy's motorcycle left the road, became airborne and struck a guardrail.

A spokesman from the Coles County Sheriff's Department said Percy was traveling southbound on the road, apparently returning to Charleston after attending a party near Walnut Creek State Park in Douglas County.

The party is believed to have been held on private property near the state park. A Douglas County Sheriff's spokesman said police are attempting to locate the owner of the property and its sponsor.

According to a Coles County employee, who wished to remain anonymous, several posters were distributed throughout the Charleston area last week advertising the party.

Approximately 300 people are believed to have attended this year's party, Lynch said.

In an earlier interview, Lynch said he could not comment on Percy's blood-alcohol level until receiving toxicology test results.

Parking debate comes too late to save square

Tuesday night, the Charleston City Council finally took some solid action on the square parking situation. The city council will allow the city to lease a parking lot on the corner of Sixth Street and Van Buren Avenue. Some of the lot will be for county employees and some will be available for businessmen.

In related action, an ordinance was passed which bans parking on the square between 11:59 p.m. on Sunday to 4 a.m. Monday, to allow crews to clean the streets. The city council also relaxed the two-hour parking restriction on the square on weekdays.

All these efforts are being done mostly to attract shoppers to the square, as 60 businesses have left the square during the past seven years.

Did these actions come too late? Probably. Students are a big economic factor in Charleston. They're not going to the square to shop. There's nothing there for them except bars.

The first thing students see when they get into town is Wal-Mart. And if one has ever been to Wal-Mart, he/she can see that there is more traffic there than the square can ever hope to accommodate. The sad fact is that no business on the square can hope to compete with Wal-Mart.

The parking debate is a last gasp of a dying man. People who work on the square are grasping for straws and arguing about who's getting the shortest one.

Businessmen complain that county workers take up too many parking spaces on the square and should have to park a couple of blocks away. County workers say they are getting a bum rap from the businessmen. There you have it - the big debate over, what has become at this time, a meaningless point.

No doubt the debate will continue until there are no more businessmen on the square left to argue. Then the county workers can park anywhere they want.

Wal-Mart finds another small town to rule.

Assassination not our responsibility

Some of the weirdest conversations can be heard while sitting on a bar stool while the weather is hot.

"We've gotta waste him," said one of my beer drinking friends while devouring a cold one Wednesday afternoon.

"Who?" As I said with a laugh, "Mayor Lanman?"

"No somebody more important to my American pride than beer kegs; that insane guy."

"I think you mean Iraq's president, Saddam Hussein."

"Yeah, that's the guy. We gotta waste him before he steals all of the world's oil."

"Well, I think that is a noble cause for concern Phil, but do you really think we need to eliminate Hussein from the world to solve the Middle East crisis?"

"Absolutely, we should send in the CIA to kick him where the sun don't shine and put in a democratic government which won't charge me a buck-fifty for gas."

"Wait a minute, the CIA? Where do you get this stuff from anyway?"

Then it hit me. Phil handed me page nine of Wednesday's Daily Eastern News where I read in an Associated Press wire story that "the easiest way to end the Persian Gulf Crisis might be to have Hussein removed - and don't think that the idea hasn't occurred in Washington," or in Charleston.

Quoted in the story is Sen. Richard Lugar (R-Ind.) who has this formula for dealing with Hussein, "It seems to me important that Saddam Hussein must either leave or be removed."

One of the things I love the most about this country is that anyone can express their opinions in public, but why is a U.S. senator publicly expressing his plan to eliminate another country's leader and break a law in the process.

Assassinating a foreign leader is strictly prohibited by a 14-year-old presidential order.

But despite the order, many Americans, including President Bush, who does not completely distance himself from the proposal, want Hussein removed, dead or alive, to end the crisis.

Granted, Western countries need a constant flow of Persian oil to keep their economies from sliding into deep recessions, but where does one draw the line and conclude that enough is enough?

It is this grey area where we find our country today. Bush has made the largest military commitment since the Vietnam Conflict to protect Saudi Arabia from a fate similar to Kuwait's.

It is at this point I disagree with any person who demands the U.S. do anything further than protect Saudi Arabia from invasion and demands the withdrawal of Iraqi troops from Kuwait.

It is not our country's responsibility to remove a "madman" from office. That is the responsibility of the people of Iraq to stand up to Hussein and confront him on his actions.

Hussein came to power by assassination and he probably will fall out of power by assassination. He has already survived several plots against his life. But whether or not that happens internally in Iraq, the U.S., despite past history, can not get into the business of eliminating foreign leaders just because they disagree with U.S. policies.

"Well, maybe we can get someone else to pull the trigger."

Sure Phil.

Breach in morality is ruining society

Dear editor:

The environment is in such a state as to constitute an emergency. Ted Turner, the media mogul, has made it a priority to educate the public concerning environmental issues. There is the problem of apathy. Rural America doesn't live close enough to industrial pollution for it to constitute an emergency in the minds of rural Americans.

But a problem does exist. Scientists have detected a breach of the precious ozone layer of our atmosphere. Without the scientists, we might have continued to damage that barrier, allowing poisonous rays of the earth with carcinogens. Our health, and indeed our very lives, are at risk.

Christians are a lot like scientists. And they are alert to dangers in our environment. There is a serious breach in the moral fabric of our society. Lust for the dollar and selfish pleasures are eroding the freedoms that have been won because of the sacrifices our parents made.

Let me name a few of the carcinogens: Drugs, pornography, teen sex and pregnancy, abortion on demand for sex determination and birth control, violence and profanity in the name of art and free speech, restrictions on religious expression in the name of separation of Church and State.

The modern priests and humanists (Ted Turner), who have little regard for traditional Judeo-Christian values and the ones who embrace these values, have rewritten the Ten Commandments so as to remove any religious association and responsibility. This is fine if we are products of chance. Then there are no moral absolutes, and morality is merely a man-made construction - just like the American flag that can be burned.

The morality of the Humanist is based on situation ethics. Nothing is absolute since there is no God to whom we will ultimately answer. I am at liberty, therefore, to twist the letter and distort the spirit of the Law and the Constitution to serve my personal perversion, even if it means poisoning the air around the people, who, by their sacrifice, are attempting to make this world a healthier place in which to live.

The Christians, on the other hand, believe we live in a moral world created by a moral God and that he has given us an absolute standard of conduct by which we might realize the full purpose of our being. "Love one another as have loved you."

One doesn't have to believe in God to enjoy some of the benefits of his love. But the restrictions of his love as a society place on those who believe in a God of love (Brother Jed notwithstanding) will seriously limit the grace that all of us would otherwise be allowed to enjoy. Liberty was a Christian concept long before there ever was an American Civil Liberties Union restricting Christian liberty.

Escort, please ROTC to reinstate service in October

By LORI HIGGINS
Campus editor

Although the number of people using Eastern's ROTC escort program last semester dwindled to just a few, the department is again preparing to provide the service another year.

Capt. Vance Chartier, adviser to the program, said the escort service will give students a second chance by beginning the same program at the beginning of October.

The ROTC escort service program started last October after two women were allegedly attacked while walking alone on campus.

Two other attacks were reported shortly after the escort service began, but were later ruled falsified.

Interest in the ROTC escort program peaked shortly after the first two attacks, with the service receiving several calls each night.

However, when the last two attacks were questioned, the number of students using the program died down.

"The numbers got so low that we went ahead and canceled it," Chartier said.

He added another factor that caused the decrease was that it started to get dark later in the evening and students were not afraid of walking home alone.

Chartier hopes this year's escort system will receive the same amount of interest that it did last October.

"We're hoping that when we start it up again we'll get good support," he said.

In order to use the ROTC escort service, students will be given a phone number to call - a number yet to be arranged by ROTC.

When students call that number to request an escort, they will tell that escort where they are and where they are going. They will then be given a code name which will be used when the escort arrives to pick them up.

Since the service is still in the planning stages, Chartier said they are looking for escort volunteers.

"We'll open it up to volunteers, but they have to be screened," Chartier said. Potential escorts will be interviewed by an officer or faculty member "to make sure they're in there for the right reasons," Chartier added.

"We want people who are really interested in providing a service to the students," he noted.

Leak scrubs Columbia launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) - NASA scrubbed the launch of space shuttle Columbia for the third time Wednesday after discovering a leak as liquid hydrogen and liquid oxygen were being poured into the fuel tank.

"We will be scrubbing the launch attempt for tonight; the concentrations of hydrogen in the aft compartment (of the shuttle) are too high for launch," said space agency spokeswoman Lisa Malone.

Columbia was scheduled to blast off with seven astronauts and the $150 million Astro observatory at 1:20 a.m. Thursday. Air Force meteorologists predicted an 80 percent chance of good weather at launch time.

It was only the fifth time NASA scheduled a shuttle launch at night and the first shuttle mission in five years devoted entirely to scientific research.

Assigned to command the nine to 10 day mission was veteran astronaut Vance Brand, who at age 59 would become the oldest person to fly in space.

Speaking to NASA employees via closed-circuit television from the Johnson Space Center in Houston, Vice President Dan Quayle called the mission "cutting-edge space activity."

He said that despite its recent problems, NASA is up to doing the job it was assigned to do. "Take it from a guy who knows a lot about unwarranted criticism," he said.

RHA gears up for first meeting of fall semester

By ANN GILL
Staff writer

The tradition of improving Eastern's residence halls continues as the Residence Hall Association gears up for its first meeting of the semester Thursday in Carman Hall.

Eastern's Residence Hall Association is a student organization composed of presidents from each hall council that work as a group to coordinate activities and serve as a governing body for the residence halls.

The organization also serves as a link between students living on campus and the Housing Office by providing them the opportunity to make recommendations concerning hall policies and procedures.

Among the organizations most recent improvements is the addition of cable television boxes and security keyed elevators.

However, improving residence halls isn't the only benefit of RHA. The organization also helps individual students better themselves.

"RHA is the perfect way to build leadership skills while having a terrific time and making life long friends," said RHA President John Beirbaum.

RHA Rep. Ryan Zufall added: "It's an organization that lets one grow both responsibly and socially."

RHA, which is mostly known for such entertaining activities as Hollywood Squares Eastern style and Little People's Weekend, also provides such social services as the Rookie Runner Program which helps students settle into their residence halls.

In addition, RHA sponsors such activities as a Haunted House on Halloween, a Lip Sync and Talent Show and semester exam snacks.

RHA is a member of the Illinois Residence Hall Association, Great Lakes Affiliate of College and University Residence Halls and the National Association of College and University Residence Halls.

Bush sees progress in U.S. war on drugs

WASHINGTON – President Bush said Wednesday that the United States “is making progress” in the war on drugs, but one congressman said the year-old program isn’t doing enough to help impoverished Americans.

“Drug czar (William) Bennett and President Bush cannot deny that we are losing the drug war in our inner cities,” said Rep. John Conyers Jr., D-Mich., chairman of the House Committee on Government Operations.

“Prevention and education efforts directed at the educated middle class appear to be having a dramatic effect,” Conyers said.

Treatment programs have room for clients who can afford to pay.”

However, the chronically addicted cannot pay when they are poor and unemployed, as is often the case.” Bush and Bennett, the president’s chief lieutenant in the drug war, emphasized the positive in speeches and a white paper released Wednesday, the first anniversary of the president’s announcement of his war on drugs.

“I think America is making progress against drugs and will continue to do so,” Bush said, but he acknowledged that the war is far from won.

Gainesville crime scenes labeled difficult

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) – A forensic specialist said Wednesday the three apartments where the bodies of five college students were found “the most difficult” crime scenes he has ever seen.

Dr. Michael West made the comment after hunting for fingerprints at the apartments with high-tech equipment. West, a dentist and deputy medical examiner from Hattiesburg, Miss., said the apartments gave clues of a careful, cautious killer.

“I’ve never been associated with a crime scene that had so many violent attacks and little evidence left behind,” West said.

“This individual that perpetrated these crimes is not your average criminal. He’s very methodical, and very neat. He doesn’t leave any traces of his presence in the crime scenes.”

Students in Gainesville remembered their dead classmates at a memorial service in a 10,000-seat sports center. Also Wednesday, the University of Florida announced scholarships in memory of the students.

Three of the victims were students at the University of Florida and two were from Santa Fe Community College. One of the two later enrolled in the university but hadn’t attended classes. Their bodies were found late last month.

“We are struggling with the conflicting emotions of grief, anger and fear,” college President John Lombardi told about 600 people attending the memorial service.

Dr. Larry Tyree, president of Santa Fe Community College, said: “With each horrible tragedy ... the sense of helplessness has grown in each of us.” As the grisly job of examining evidence and looking for a killer continued, investigators divulged more brief glimpses into what they have learned about the crimes.

West used an experimental reflective ultraviolet imaging system that intensifies light 70,000 times to examine two of the three crime scenes Tuesday for fingerprints; he returned Wednesday to look at the final apartment.

The Miami Herald on Wednesday quoted sources as saying the killer cruelly posed his victims for maximum shock value.

The killer placed Santa Fe Community College student Christa Hoyt’s severed head in the direct line of vision of anyone entering the apartment and positioned a mirror in one of the apartments to show a victim’s body to any passerby who happened to look in the window, the Herald reported.

A MILD-MANNERED MISSION

Can Eastern economics professor Allen Smith save a country teetering on fiscal disaster?

Eastern economics professor Allen Smith has almost hit the big time. Every week, his picture appears in 15 different newspapers and underneath it, he "educates" more than 1 million people in five different states on how a corrupt and crooked U.S. government is needlessly spending their money.

"The American public has been misled by the government," said Smith, whose economic theories have even caught the attention of former presidential candidate Michael Dukakis. "I think politicians have put their political self-interests above the interests of the nation. You can't tell the truth to the American public and get elected to office today."

Smith maintains that our society is an economically illiterate, mostly because of neglect from elected politicians. And by using his weekly column as his cape, Smith hopes to be a crusader for economic justice.

During the 1988 presidential elections, Smith called up Sen. Paul Simon's office and pointed out that in his last five years as president, Ronald Reagan added more to the national debt than all the presidents from George Washington to Jimmy Carter combined.

Simon's office thought that was pretty interesting and passed it on to Michael Dukakis' national headquarters in Boston. Dukakis thought it was pretty interesting too — so he threw it at George Bush in a televised debate.

Since the Reagan years, the federal debt has tripled and now stands at about $3 trillion, Smith said. In 1981, it was $1 trillion.

But Smith says that hardly anyone knows that. And that's what frustrates him.

"My frustration was that I wasn't seeing anything in the news about this," said Smith.

Smith said he polled about 460 students at Eastern and asked them if they had any idea that there was a budget deficit problem in the United States.

He said less than 10 percent of them knew there was a deficit problem.

Last December, he wrote his first column, about "understanding economics" and didn't expect any newspaper to end up publishing it. A small downstate newspaper, the Salem Times Commoner accepted his column in February and it was delivered to about 6,000 readers.

His approach is simple: He takes complex economic problems and tells the average Johnny-come-lately why he or she should be concerned about them.

"Understanding is part of my vocabulary," Smith says. "People are beginning to realize that we're in deep economic trouble and they want to do something about it."

By March, his column was picked up by six other newspapers including the Springfield State Journal-Register, the Evansville Courier (Ind.) and the South Bend Tribune. In mid-August, the Decatur Herald & Review accepted the column, to push circulation over the 1 million mark.

Just this week, Smith has recruited 70 other newspapers and hopes that at least 15 of them will accept his column. Prospects include the Arizona Republic and the Pittsburgh Press. If both of those major newspapers accept Smith's column, circulation will jump another 500,000.

Presently, Smith is read as far west as Portland, Ore. and as far east as Pennsylvania. He even has readers in Huntsville, Ala.

Smith, age 52, blames economic illiteracy on politicians who won't admit that the United States is strapped for cash and may be headed for a recession as early as next year.

"For the past 10 years, professional economists have had no input on the economy," he said, noting that president's particularly Reagan, have ignored the advice of some of the nation's top economists. "Now we're sort of in a no man's land because whatever direction we go, there's going to be complication."

For college students, Smith predicts this year is not the best to be looking for a job. As the deficit worsens, unemployment will also and the nation will be headed toward a gradual recession. As a result, employers are going to be reluctant to hire, especially new college graduates.

"We're in an economic trap right now," Smith said. "To get out of a recession, we usually cut taxes and increase spending. But to reduce the deficit, we need to raise taxes and cut spending. The prescription for getting out of a recession is exactly the opposite of reducing the debt."

Smith said the crisis in the Persian Gulf doesn't help matters, either.

The rising price of crude oil is contributing to inflation, he said. And that causes a reduction in total spending, which will move the nation closer toward recession.

"We're using the excuse that we're there to help Kuwait. It seems to me that we're there because we're dependent on their oil," Smith said. "We could probably be energy self-sufficient if we had followed the policies of the Ford and Carter Administrations."

To support his argument, Smith notes that $700 million was spent in 1980 for research on alternative energy sources. This year, spending for that research is only $1 million.

Meanwhile, the U.S. is projected to spend $6 million in the Persian Gulf every day for the next six months.

"You don't know you're in a recession until six months after you're into it," he said. "But recessions don't last forever."

The last recession was in 1981-82 and it was the most serious since the Great Depression. Unemployment rates skyrocketed to more than 10 percent.

In a nutshell, Smith recommends that the federal government gradually enact a 10-year revenue plan to start reducing the deficit.

"Right now, there is an illusion of prosperity and that's being bought with red ink," Smith added. "We've been living on borrowed money."

About $200 billion worth.

Offensive line earns high marks in loss

By CHRIS BOGHOSSIAN
Sports editor

After looking at the game films from Saturday's 28-17, opening-game loss to Northern Illinois Saturday, Eastern football coach Bob Spoo said he was both pleased and disappointed with his team's performance.

With the opening loss, does Spoo think his players will suffer mentally?

"I don't think there's much of a letdown," he said. "Of course, there's the usual disappointment, especially when you look at the film and see that the chances were there."

Spoo said he thought that the offensive line — an area that going into the contest gave him great concern — played above his expectations.

"That was the greatest surprise in that game," Spoo said. "I was pleased, to say the least. I thought they gave a great effort. (The offensive line) still may develop into a strength for us."

"They were doing a lot of things, but most of all they were flying around down there. That's what impressed me the most."

Spoo and his Panthers travel to Natchitoches, La., to take on Northwestern Louisiana in a non-conference contest on Saturday, and Spoo has some concerns.

"From a negative point of view," Spoo said, "we knew that we would give up yards (against Northern), but we didn't think we'd give up as many passing yards."

Northern quarterback Stacey Robinson threw for a career-high 211 yards against Eastern in completing 12 of 15 passes. The Panther defense let Northern's offense total 463 yards.

Spoo was also upset with the fact that Northern completed 9 of 14 third-down conversions. "That's another area that we're not very pleased with," Spoo said.

Spoo added that Northern's I-A status and the fact that the game was the team's home opener gave his players some motivation, but he is worried that they will lose some intensity for the upcoming game.

"One of our main concerns is not having the same intensity going in," Spoo said. "We have to create them. We're not playing a I-A team. We've got to be willing to make improvements and develop our game plan, but the sole motivational factor is important."

"We have to play with the same intensity Saturday. I expect another physical-type game."

Spoo said another aspect he and his coaches have been discussing is the team's inability to score points while inside Northern's 25-yard line. The Panthers scored on just two of six of those opportunities.

"It was a lack of execution,"

Spoo said. "That's a fact that I'm disturbed about. On the national average, you're supposed to come away two-thirds of the time with points. It's a significant concern."

"We only scored one-third of the time. That can't be your average. If it is, the rest of the year is going to be disappointing."

Of the entire team that traveled to Huskie Stadium Saturday, only three did not play.

"That's part of our whole plan," Spoo said. "We have other goals, but we accomplished some of them there (at Northern). We played everybody. I feel that will be important to us down the road."

Spoo mentioned that junior flanker Jason Cook, who missed the opener in DeKalb because of a hamstring injury, is expected to be back for Saturday's contest against the Demons.

Cook led the Panthers with 37 receptions for 730 yards.

New stadium scoreboard

Home 0, Visitors 0.

That's what Eastern's new scoreboard will read at the start of the home-opening football game against McNeese State on Saturday, Sept. 15.

"We have every expectation that (the scoreboard) will be in place for the home opener," said Eastern Athletic Director Mike Ryan.

Ryan said the scoreboard, donated by Marion Pepsi, specifically Harry L. Crisp, totaled a cost of about $175,000.

Ryan also said that the new scoreboard, which will feature a state-of-the-art track timer, will also have a 2 1/2-foot screen going across the top that will have an electronic message running through with game-related material.

Ryan added that workers started on construction of the board about the middle of last week, and that it will be "considerably larger than the old board."

White Sox shut down Royals

CHICAGO (AP) — Greg Hibbard pitched a four-hitter for his first major-league shutout and Robin Ventura's bases-loaded single broke open a scoreless game in the eighth inning Wednesday night as the Chicago White Sox beat the Kansas City Royals 3-0.

Hibbard (12-8) walked five, struck out six and worked out of bases-loaded jams in the seventh and eighth innings. Mel Stottlemyre Jr. made his first big-league start and shut out Chicago on one hit for seven innings.

Steve Farr (10-6) relieved to start the eighth and Chicago loaded the bases with two outs on three walks, one of them intentional. Ventura singled home two runs and Ivan Calderon followed with an RBI single.

The Royals wasted a scoring opportunity in the seventh. Danny Tartabull led off with a double and Bo Jackson, who had not struck out in 33 at-bats since returning from the disabled list July 16, fanned for the third time in the game.

Hibbard loaded the bases by hitting Willie Wilson with a pitch and walking Pecota, but Frank White hit a shallow fly ball and center fielder Lance Johnson threw out Tartabull at the plate. The Royals again loaded the bases in the eighth on a one-out double by Kevin Seitzer, an intentional walk to George Brett and a walk to Tartabull. But Hibbard escaped by striking out Jackson for the fourth time.

Phillies 4, Cubs 1

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies, shut out on one hit by Chicago's Mike Harkey until he experienced stiffness in his pitching shoulder in the seventh inning, scored four times in the eighth and beat the Chicago Cubs 4-1 Wednesday night.

Lenny Dykstra singled home the tying run, Darren Daulton's RBI double put the Phillies ahead and Charlie Hayes capped the rally with a two-run single.

Winner Terry Mulholland (8-8) gave up four hits in eight innings and won for the first time since his no-hitter against San Francisco on Aug. 15. Roger McDowell pitched the ninth for his 19th save.

The Phillies trailed 1-0 going into the eighth. Pinch-hitter

Rickey Jordan led off with a single off Steve Wilson (4-8), pinch-hitter Randy Ready sacrificed pinch-runner Louie Meadows to second and Dykstra singled home the tying run.

Expos 6, Cardinals 2

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Rookie Chris Nabholz raised his record to 4-0 and Tim Wallach and Larry Walker hit two-run homers as the Montreal Expos defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 6-2 Wednesday night.

Nabholz started the season in Class AA and was 0-6 with a 4.83 ERA at Triple A Indianapolis, but has a 2.78 ERA in two stints with the Expos. The left-hander went 5 1-3 innings, giving up two runs and five hits. Mel Rojas pitched two hits and Tim Burke went 1 2-3 for his 16th save.

Cardinals starter Jose DeLeon (7-15) has lost 10 of his last 11 decisions. DeLeon pitched six innings, giving up all the Montreal runs and seven hits.

Wallach hit his 19th home run after Tim Raines' two-out single in the first inning and Walker hit his 17th in the fifth after Wallach singled with one out.

Netters outlast Portland

By ANN TASTAD
Staff writer

Just because you record a loss in the stat book doesn't mean when the score is final that you've automatically lost the game. Such was the case with Eastern's volleyball team Wednesday night when they took on Portland in McAfee Gym.

"We keep finding ways to win," said volleyball coach Betty Ralston. "They out hit us by 25 kills, we had 61 and they had 86." Eastern won the game in five grueling matches, 15-13, 7-15, 15-12, 5-15 and 15-12.

Senior Diane Kruto led Eastern with 17 kills and 20 digs while Deanna Lund added 15 kills and 31 digs. Amy Van Eekeren had 42 assists for the Lady Panthers.

"We didn't use Cindy (Geib) as well as we needed to but you need practice time to work on things need to improve on and we've only had one practice since our last game," said Ralston.

The lack of practice time Ralston is finding these days will continue through the week and weekend as Eastern hosts New Mexico State Thursday at 7 p.m. in McAfee Gym, and then travels north to Mt. Pleasant, Miss., to participate in the Central Michigan Invitational over the weekend.

Ralston noted that one of the weaknesses she saw in the game against Portland was in serve-receive.

"If the other team knows you have a receiver not returning the ball then they'll just keep drilling it at that person," said Ralston. "We're going to come in early before the New Mexico State game and go over some serve-receive patters so if things go poorly again we can adjust."

The Lady Panthers are now 3-2 on the season and Ralston noted that the win over Portland was definatley a team win.

"We're not a team with one super star," she said. "The people who I asked to go into the game did the job I asked them to do and this is a nice win to get."

Soccer coaches call last year's Cup incident history

By R.J. GERBER
Staff writer

It's a new season — last year is history.

That's what Northern Illinois soccer coach Willie Roy and Eastern head coach Cizo Mosnia agree on, but that is about it. After the 'no contest' ruling by the NCAA last season, the game was never rescheduled.

The game in question was the Governor's Cup contest between the two at Lakeside Field last fall. After Eastern had taken the lead on a goal by Mario Mihalic, some debris were thrown onto the field. Roy thought that for the safety of himself and his players, he should remove his team from the field. After Roy did so, the game was ruled a 'no contest'.

"It was an unfortunate thing," Roy said. "When we come and visit a team we expect to get proper treatment."

After a strong urging from the NCAA selection committee to replay the game, Eastern Athletic Director Mike Ryan contacted Northern.

"A problem developed between the two institutions," Ryan said. "I talked to Northern's athletic director (Gerald O'Dell) and he said he would contact me after he talked to Roy. When O'Dell called back he said that it wasn't in Northern's best interest to reschedule the game.

"I really felt that Eastern was bending over backward to play the game."

In any case, the game was never played and both teams were excluded from post-season action in 1989.

Roy said that he shouldn't get all of the blame, however.

"That's all history," Roy said. "We will play anybody, anywhere."

The Huskies will get their wish Sunday when they battle the Panthers at Lakeside Field.

"We are looking forward to a nice game," Roy said. "We have a lot of respect for Eastern."

One person that has really been looking forward to the Huskies is Mihalic. The senior forward is returning to action Sunday after serving a two-game suspension for violating an NCAA rule. Mihalic said that he thought Roy was the one that turned him in, but that is false. It was Mosnia.

"I turned Mario in," Mosnia said. "I decided to do it."

Mosnia said he believes that an effort was made to play the game last year, but Northern would not comply.

"We were willing to play back-to-back games (Friday and Sunday)," Mosnia said. "But we can't change what happened. Things like that (the debris throwing) don't need to happen in sports."

Not everything about Sunday's game is negative, however. The Eastern athletic department is sponsoring a special promotion. Area youth soccer teams are invited to the game and will be presented with a coupon for a free small soda from the concession stand courtesy of Eastern.

Also, at halftime the youngsters will have the opportunity to take place in a kicking contest for fast sandwiches, compliments of Wendy's, associate athletic director Paul Lueken said. After the kicking contest the teams will be formally recognized.

Lady netters open fall slate against Illinois State

By JIM KNOBLICH
Staff writer

If last year's spring record of 17-5 is any indication of what is to come, then Eastern's women's tennis team is in for an exciting fall season.

Led by Gateway Conference "Coach of the Year" Grant Alexander, the women netters hit off the fall season against Illinois State at 3 p.m. Thursday at Weller Courts.

Last year's record is the best record ever for a women's tennis team at Eastern. With such successful results, the team also earned some well-deserved respect.

Last year's team saw veteran

Kim Rhodes receive all-conference honors at singles, as did the doubles team of Lori Neate and Cheryl Piszczek.

As voted by all the coaches in the conference, Eastern's players beat out foreigners and other American players from all over the country. Alexander attributed his team's overall success to "lots of hard work."

This year's lineup will be missing two key players from last season's squad. The loss of Kim Rhodes to student teaching and recent graduate Sue Cottingham will hurt the team lineup.

"Kim may see limited play through the semester. She is a seasoned player who knows how to win," Alexander said.

Nonetheless, the team has four returning starters at singles: co-captain Lori Neate, Missy Holste, Dawn Branon and Jill Bachochin. Also in the line is doubles specialist Cheryl Piszczek, "who will play a big role in singles this year as well as doubles" said coach Alexander.

New to the team this year are freshmen Kris Madura and Julie Purser along with sophomores Carrie Stringer and Julie Mason, all of whom will be looking to break into the singles lineup.

When asked if the team had a goal, Alexander commented: "I would like to see the girls do their own thing on court, and most importantly not to put pressure on ourselves due to last year's success."

He also commented that the girls have faced some tough competition and come up with some big wins in the past. "I would just like to see them be the best they can be," he said.

When asked if they had a goal, the girls all agreed to "go into every match with the attitude that we are going to win."

After Thursday's match, the Lady Panthers open their home schedule with the Eastern Illinois University Quadrangular on Friday and Saturday at Weller Courts, then travel to St. Louis for a match on Tuesday.

Grant Alexander
